

Net Neutrality is the single most important safeguard against corporate control of the internet. If this plan goes through, internet service providers would be able to charge websites a fee to reach consumers over faster Internet speeds. This new power (something cable giants have wanted for years) would give corporate executives enormous power over what the American people can access and share online. This would effectively give large businesses and corporations the power to influence the masses by controlling their access to information as well as squash any up and coming competitors. This is the opposite of freedom. This is the opposite of what we stand for as Americans. PROTECT NET NEUTRALITY.

-Hannah Peterson